Board of Supervisors Summary Report

Miguel Errea has been reappointed to the Agricultural Advisory Committee by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for a three year term expiring June 1, 1998.

Lawrence Porter has been reappointed to the hazardous Waste Advisory Committee by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for a three year term expiring May 12, 1998.

Margaret Leighton has been appointed to the Animal Control Advisory Board by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. She replaces Karen Head. Her term will run until July 1, 1998.

Craig Banuelos and Elva Rendon have been appointed to the Loan Administration Board of the Monterey County Revolving Loan Fund by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. They will serve at the pleasure of the Board.

Dorothy Laage has been appointed to the Board of Directors of the North County Public Recreation District by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. She replaces Mo Moshin for a term expiring November 30, 1996.

Claudia Smith was proclaimed by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors as the recipient of the F.O.O.D. Crop's Outstanding Agricultural Woman of the Year.

Curt Meyer has been appointed to the Alcohol and Drug Advisory Board by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. He re-replaces Sherry Feaster. His term will expire January 31, 1996.

EASIER THAN MAILING RESUMES - As the sun rises over the Village in Carmel Valley, 30 to 70 "day laborers" gather along Del Fino to offer their services to local homeowners and contractors. Some of the men barely speak English, some have no skills, others boast a variety of trade abilities. They are generally unobtrusive, though often a topic of discussion in the community.

Susan Rosson and John O'Brien have been appointed to the Area Agency on Aging Advisory Council by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. Rosson's term will expire January, 1998 and O'Brien's January, 1997.

John Green was recognized as an outstanding employee upon his retirement from the Monterey County Department of Social Services by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors at their June 13 meeting.

Martha Renard has been appointed to the Overall Economic Development Commission by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. Their terms will expire June 30, 1998.

Maria Young Elvin has been appointed to the Social Services Commission by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. She replaces Doris Bragdon. Her term runs until July 1, 1999.

Alex Heger has been reappointed to the Board of Directors of the Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. His term expires June 30, 1999.

OBITUARIES

RALPH HARRY BLUMENTHAL

Ralph Harry Blumenthal, 86, died July 5 at Community Hospital.

Born March 29, 1909 in Pittsburgh, Pa., Mr. Blumenthal lived in Monterey County for 33 years. He was a Rabbi, serving as an Army Chaplain (Colonel) in the U.S. Army for 30 years, retiring in 1962 after serving two years at Fort Order. He was involved in the India-Burma Campaign during his service. Following retirement from the Army, he worked for the Monterey County Probation Department from 1962-1975. He also served as an instructor at the Army Chaplain school. He was a member of Congregation Beth Israel. Rabbi Blumenthal received his BA from the University of Cincinnati; MA in Hebrew Letters and his Rabbinic Ordination in 1934 from Hebrew Union College. He held an MA in Sociology and Psychology from the University of Tennessee and a Doctor of Divinity degree from Hebrew Union College.

He is survived by his wife, Leonore Blumenthal, of Carmel.

Grave side services were held on July 14 under the direction of The Paul Mortuary.

New team re-opens the tennis club at Carmel Valley Inn with a new name

Tennis professional Bobby Montgomery, a member of the United States Professional Tennis Association (USPTA), joined in creating Tennis at the Inn with Tig Templeton (USPTA) and businessman Chick Hawley. Both Templeton and Hawley were former national junior and collegiate tennis standouts. Templeton attended

Northwestern University in Chicago and Hawley attended Rollins College in Florida. They leased the tennis facilities at Carmel Valley Inn, dissolving the Fox Hills Tennis Club which had formerly used the courts. Adding her expertise to Tennis at the Inn will be former Carmel High School and Santa Clara University tennis star, Tina Crivello-Romeka.

VALLEY VOICE

Fran Farina

At a recent national convention of waterworks officials, one hot topic of discussion was that the Monterey Peninsula had received a "404 permit". Why did this permit generate so much interest?

There are multiple processes involved in securing a 404 permit under the Clean Water Act. For the New Los Padres Water Supply Project, they included compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), National Historic Preservation Act, Endangered Species Act, Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act, and Coastal Zone Management Act.

Under the direction or oversight of about a dozen state and federal agencies, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District evaluated more than 30 alternative projects. The New Los Padres Water Supply Project was selected as the most cost effective, feasible project that preserves the continued availability of the peninsula's existing water supply, ensures drought protection, meets future water needs, and restores and protects the Carmel River environment.

The process to secure this key federal permit took 9 years. No dam has been built on a coastal stream in the past twenty years. According to the experts, this probably will be the last coastal dam built in California. The fact that the permit was issued at all is an accomplishment by our Water District.

Why was the New Los Padres project selected from all of the alternatives evaluated?

Given current laws, our present water supply will not be secure as long as it is produced at the expense of the Carmel River environment. Due to lack of surface storage, water taken from the Carmel River ground water basin to supply peninsula homes and businesses causes a 9 mile stretch of the Carmel River to dry up for several months of each year, even in years with high rainfall. This causes environmental damage to the river area, including damage to steelhead trout.

The proposed New Los Padres Project would address this issue by providing year round streamflow in most years to meet the needs of the steelhead and protect public trust resources.

The New Los Padres Water Supply Project would improve drought protection by providing about a 10-fold increase in reservoir storage. Water released from the reservoir to provide flow in the river would also refill the groundwater aquifer which is the primary source of water for Cal-Am wells that serve the peninsula. This aquifer is the major source of water supply during drought periods. Mandatory rationing would be expected in less than two out of 100 years, on average.

Additional water will be needed by the community to allow construction of new homes and businesses, remodels, and economic development over future decades. The November 7th election will cap water for growth from this project at 3,381 acre feet. This would support a 17% increase in our population.

LETTERS to the Editor

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun

I am sending you the equation for the cost to water users for the new Los Padres dam. The engineers involved can't multiply by 4,800 truck trips x 2 and come up with 9,600 so I think we all need some help.

Question #1: 24,000 acre foot reservoir = ($87,000,000. or $99,000,000, or $110,000,000 or $113,000,000 or $119,000,000 or $285,000,000 or $_____)?

Question #2: The above = $_____ per unit (748 gallons) cost to users? (Hint: divide $ amount by 24,000 acre feet by 325,851 gallons. Then multiply times 748 to get the per unit cost.) Correct answers are $11.38 or $27.26 or $_____?

Question #3: To transport cement: How many pounds of polluting material does a diesel truck put into the

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Maybe it could be called "The Return of the Grapes of Wrath".

The time frame? Maybe five years from now. The location: Salinas, and maybe Kansas, or Alabama, or a couple dozen other states.

The characters: everybody still living in Salinas after the drinking water got too salty to either drink or spray on lawns.

Chapter One opens with Henry and Susie living in their '74 Datsun, that has an empty gas tank and one tire missing. Henry and Susie are hungry most of the time. Their unemployment benefits ran out two years ago. They haven't worked since the Mall on North Main Street ran out of customers, like all of the other stores ran out of customers.

Sleeping in the Datsun isn't that bad, compared to under trees, but the long walk to the nearest emergency soup kitchen is getting to be a chore.

Henry comes back from a day of scrounging with some of his friends. "Hi, honey. Good news. Charlie knows a guy who got a job milking cows in Kansas, or maybe it was Arkansas. He says there's nothing to it. Don't even have to serve an apprenticeship. He's going to get me the address, and then all we'll need will be a little loan from your mother, for gas and a tire, and we'll be on our way."

Susie is so happy, she starts to cry. Just think, a job, and a house to live in, instead of the Datsun. Maybe it would even have an inside toilet, and a kitchen sink with a faucet with fresh water in it.

In Chapter Two we'll find out, if they get the loan from Susie's mother, and does the Datsun make it to wherever, and does he get the cow milking job, and does he get through the first day without getting kicked, like you wouldn't believe, for trying to milk the first cow from the wrong side?

SMILE WHEN YOU ACCEPT THE BLAME

Many years ago, on one of his TV shows, Art Linkletter asked a young boy what he would do if he were on an airplane full of people and the pilot announced they were running out of gas. The boy immediately declared that he would parachute right out! Mr. Linkletter and the audience laughed at the boy's obvious instinct for self preservation. But the child became confused and defensive. Tears formed in his eyes.

Sensing he had been misunderstood, Mr. Linkletter asked if something was wrong. The boy then added, "I'd jump out to get some gas, then I'd hurry back to save everybody."

Unfortunately, there are many times in our lives when we not only get the wrong impression of what someone is saying, but we actually understand exactly the opposite of what is meant. When this happens, negative consequences often result. And there can be a lot of mutual blaming after the communication breakdown is discovered, adding insult to the injury.

If a patron orders scrambled eggs and is then served them over easy, the server should immediately and graciously take them back. But what if the server swears the patron said over easy? Or, what if the patron did say over easy, but only thought scrambled? Or, what if the patron knew he said over easy, then changed his mind and blamed it on the server?

It's all the same. The server should smile and take them back. The difference in the scenarios might be the attitude with which the server corrects the problem, but that should never be revealed to the customer. The smile should remain the same.

Those who have served (either actually or figuratively), know this to be true in principle, but they may find it hard to practice. It's particularly hard when they know it was they that had been taken advantage of or blamed for someone else's mistake. The customer is always right.

This is why, when I received a call from one of my sellers a few weeks ago, I knew I was in a tough situation. The escrow was supposed to close in one week, but the buyer's loan had not yet been formally approved. The seller was ready to move out now. She had help available this week-end and was ready to sign a lease.

But she didn't want to get stuck paying for two homes. The contract said one week and she wanted me to tell her whether it would close or not. She had to know.

I explained that I didn't have a crystal ball, almost anything could still happen. But she pressed me. I sensed that she had gotten everything ready and was anxious to move. So far, I told her, "there was no evidence that this sale won't close on time. The buyers have a large down payment and are eager to move in on time."

"There has been no evidence at all that everything won't go as planned. Most of the time, loans are only formally approved within days of the projected closing date. But there are so many unknown factors, it's important to know that the date is nothing more than a target date."

"But I have to find a place to live and give them a date. I have to schedule the moving truck and give them a date. I have to know what date to have the utilities switched."

In my mind I heard her say that she was ready to move and could I reassure her? I remember saying, in my mind, that she may have to be prepared to pay two house payments for a short time, but if she had organized everything this far, she was probably OK to go ahead.

"But if you're really worried, I would wait until next week." (I remember saying that...I think.)

So, to be on the safe side, we decided to write an addendum to the contract specifying the damages the buyer would pay if the escrow was delayed. I sent it to the other agent and the seller proceeded to move out.

The escrow was delayed three weeks. The other agent never got the addendum signed. The lender needed extra documents at the last minute. The buyers even delayed it one week longer so they wouldn't have to move on the July 4th weekend!

When the seller finally went in to sign her closing documents, she instructed the escrow company to withhold the amount of "damages" from my commission because I had mislead her and instructed her to move. I felt that I had been hit in the stomach! I, too, had lost sleep in the past weeks over this transaction. I felt betrayed by the buyer, the other agent and the lender and, now, my own client!

I called her up and told her I was disappointed that she had singled me out. Her reply said it all. "You knew I was in no position to pay for two homes. You shouldn't have encouraged me to move."

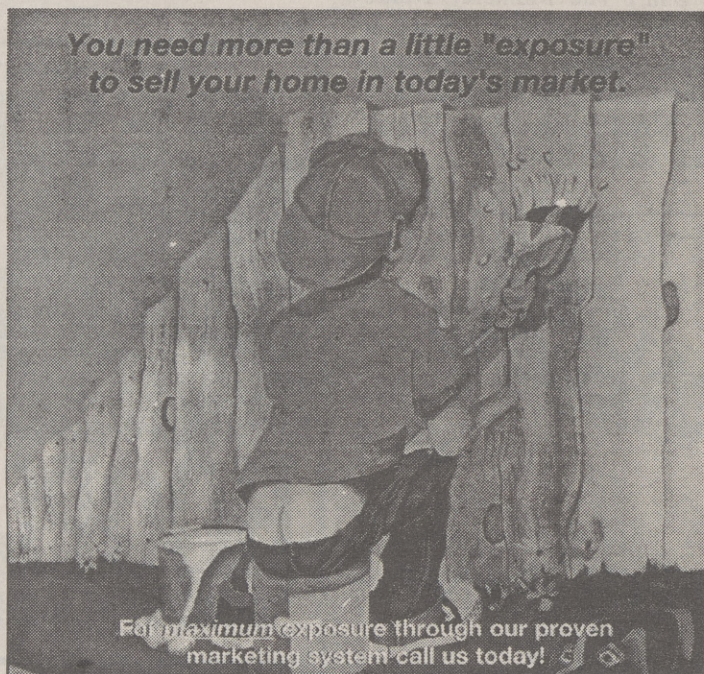

So, her phone call that day was not to get reassurance, it was to get protection; to give her the courage to make the decision to wait.

In business, we must remember that to err is human. There will be times when the wrong message is communicated. But if "customer service" is truly our goal, taking responsibility for the error is a sign of maturity as well as a gesture of good will to insure repeat business. It's also just being a good human.

I told her this: "what's the most important to me is to know that if you ever saw me in line at a store, you'd be happy to see me."

As long as I wasn't being blamed for this problem, I concluded, I wouldn't mind contributing to her loss.

Then I proceeded to negotiate with her and I agreed to split the difference. So, you tell me, how are those eggs on my face cooked?
